

To Whom It May Concern,

Hello. I am writing this letter because I would love to be a part of your design team.

What am I looking for?

I relish the opportunity to work with people who genuinely care about the users for which they design. I want to learn more than I ever thought I could. I want a family of designers who enjoy seeing one another each day. Most importantly, I want tough problems to solve.

How can I help?

While I have an academic background in research, I prefer to exercise my technical abilities. Simply put, I love adopting new technologies. When I am not trying out with new prototyping tools (i.e. Quartz Composer), I am learning to program in Javascript and Objective C. Simply put, I love learning and want to continue my education in design and technology with your team.

Why am I a good fit?

As a designer, I believe it is imperative to understand not only your users, but the engineers and business teams who create the product as well. While I can fluently speak the language of design and UX, I bring two years of startup marketing/sales experience as well as proficiency in front-end development. Being a strong, yet fluid and versatile member of a successful team is importance to me.

When can I start?

As soon as possible. I am very open to relocation. Let's chat at "wesley.haines@me.com"

Sincerely,

Wesley Haines
